2012 McDonald's Tray Liner Contest

The Supervisor of Elections office is gearing up for a busy election and anticipating that the 2012 General Election will capture the attention of many residents in Indian River County and across the country.

In order to create excitement and promote involvement in the voting process for the children of Indian River County, the Supervisor of Elections office is partnering with local McDonald's owners to carry on the tradition of the McDonald's Tray Liner Contest. In past Presidential election years the contest has been a huge success, and Leslie Swan, Supervisor of Elections encourages all eligible students to participate in this exciting contest.

The Tray Liner Contest is open to all Indian River County students in the fourth grade. Students are invited to submit their best patriotic artwork to the Supervisor of Elections office by Friday, September 14, 2012. The Elections Office will announce the winner of the contest on Monday, September 20, 2012, and a celebratory event will be hosted on Saturday, October 27th at Joe and MaryAnn Conrado's McDonald's® on US 1, to debut the winner's artwork. The winning tray liner design will be used in local McDonald's restaurants for two weeks preceding the 2012 Presidential Election.

The opportunity to participate in a patriotic contest provides parents and children the chance to talk about patriotism and America's freedom to vote. It allows the younger generation to get excited about democracy in a way that relates to them. It is never too early to introduce children to the importance of voting and the privileges American citizens enjoy because of our freedom.
